Introduction

Courses in speaking and listening has major place in English language program in the world nowadays. Way of teaching these skills has changed now. We need to upgrade our theoretical and practical knowledge to teach these skills. Therefore, this article highlights the current and latest techniques in teaching speaking and listening skills.

As teachers, we always hope that our students should speak English fluently and listen us and our assignments and instructions carefully. Speaking and listening are closely related to each other. These skills are less taught and have paid less attention. Listening is least researched of all four language skills. It indicates that it is less understood process.

It is very important for the students who are not native speaker. However, developing listening and speaking is also vital for first language speakers. Speaking plays very important role in every phase of life. It is very important and required in student as well as in professional life. As far as listening is considered, we need to train our students to be a good listener. Sometimes we notice that our students do not listen carefully and do not pay the attention whatever teacher is saying in the class and miss the important points of the lectures and instructions. It can effect their learning. It is a good idea to train explicitly our students for listening skills so students can retain more of the information that are given to them. There is a big demand of speaking and listening in this globalized world.

Students' Perception

Some students have a perception that classroom teaching does not prepare them to face the real world. There are very less pattern of interaction of the real world in the classroom. So now we need to think that how can we teach and prepare our students for real interaction?

The Importance of Speaking and Listening

Good oral communication is necessary in every aspect of life and work. Many surveys have revealed that it is the key skill highly demanded by the employers. People having good communication can explain things clearly and contribute to the meetings and discussion. They have international exposure and are more successful in their career. Good communication skill establishes the positive relationships with others. It is essential from academic points of view too. Students need to have a good command over these skills in order to have productive discussions in all subjects. These skills make them proficient to express their ideas clearly and listen something carefully and understand the point fully. It is very helpful to strengthen the social relationship.

Why Speaking and Listening Matters

Speaking and listening is necessary and fundamental to work and everyday life. People with good oral communication can develop a healthy and productive relationship with others. They can explain things clearly and make case for themselves. Oral communication is the skill most valued by the employers. Listening and speaking are the core component of second language proficiency. There are many surveys that tell that employers are looking for the people who are good at communicating.

Challenges encountered while teaching listening skill

To understand better the difficulties faced in teaching listening skill, we should begin by identifying the challenges faced by students while undergoing listening. There is lack of interest among students for listening. It is noticed that very few of them pay attention on the materials that is being played in the classroom. It seems tiring for them. To tackle this problem, it is very necessary to provide materials that are interesting for students. Fast recording is also a reason for students to not pay attention. Mostly students are not able to follow entire text in English because of variation in cultural background and regional accents.

It is found that mostly teachers have spoken about the problems faced while teaching listening are practical. Lack of equipped labs is the first problem. Equipped lab is the first requirement to run teaching listening in effective and smooth way. Many universities and institutes have prescribed listening skill but do not have equipped labs. Another problem in teaching listening skill is the unavailability of integrated listening materials. Materials should be suitable and interesting that can suit the interest and cultural of the students. The available listening materials do not suit the learners' culture.

Current trends in teaching listening skill

Presently, the role of listening in learning and teaching foreign language has significantly changed because of the development in the field of information technology and availability of free authentic audios and videos materials on the internet. The availability of free online audio and video materials has provided the opportunity for new language teaching sequences. The use of authentic audio and video materials to teach language skills provides the ideal opportunity for students to listen native speakers of English and foreigners with different accents.

Latest techniques to teach listening and speaking skills
